Lively Discussion on Class in America!

Barbara Jensen has been examining and teaching about working class cultures for over thirty years as a university instructor, an eloquent and moving speaker, and as leader of dozens of workshops on a variety of aspects of working class life, cultures, and psychology. A founding mother of the Working Class Studies Association, and currently its president, Barbara has been instrumental in building the field of working class studies in the United States.

“Class is an injustice that says some Americans deserve more time, leisure, control, and far more financial reward, than others. Classism is the set of myths that keep those class divisions in place.”
